Honoring our heroes

by Maj. Gen. Darren W. McDew

Air Force District of Washington Commander

Joint Base Andrews, Md. — In the National Capital Region, you do not have to look far to find monuments honoring our heroic Airmen, Soldiers, Sailors, Marines, and Coast Guardsmen who have paid the ultimate price in defense of our great Nation.

This weekend, Americans will visit the memorials and cemeteries in Washington D.C. and throughout the U.S. as well as in Europe and the Pacific to honor the hundreds of thousand fallen service members who have given their lives for our country and our freedom.

Many will remember grandparents, parents, brothers, sisters, aunts and uncles who served in World War I and World War II, Korea, Vietnam, and the first Gulf War. Many more will pay tribute to husbands, wives, sons and daughters who recently lost their lives in Afghanistan and Iraq.

Think about that...memorials and military cemeteries spread across this nation and throughout the world. The VA's National Cemetery Administration maintains approximately 3.1 million gravesites at 131 national cemeteries in 39 states and U.S. territories, as well as in 33 "soldiers' lots" and monument sites. The American Battle Monuments Commission manages 24 overseas military cemeteries, and 25 memorials, monuments, and markers to honor those who served in World War I or World War II. The overseas locations memorialize more than 218,000 Americans with nearly 125,000 gravesites, and commemorate an additional 94,000 on "Tablets of the Missing."

In Arlington National Cemetery, 3rd U.S. Infantry Regiment Soldiers (The Old Guard), U.S. Marine Corps Ceremonial and Guard Company Marines, U.S. Navy Ceremonial Guardsmen, U.S. Air Force Honor Guard members, and U.S. Coast Guard Ceremonial Honor Guard members will place more than 250,000 grave decorating flags. The flags will remain through Memorial Day.

The numbers are staggering, but they do not account for thousands more buried in state veterans' cemeteries throughout the country.

The numbers also tell a story. These heroes hailed from every town and city in America. They came from every walk of life - young men and women straight out of high school and college to farmers, policemen, teachers, doctors, lawyers - you name it. Their ethnic backgrounds are equally as diverse. But they all had one thing in common - they served our nation during times of peace and war. They served as shields for America to keep war from reaching our front door. Unfortunately, too many lost their lives in foreign lands never to see their families again.

Today, we are faced with the grim reality that the number of fatalities since we began operations in Afghanistan and Iraq is up to more than 6,400. Every one of those losses is

Perseverance

by Col. Matt Molineux

6th Operations Group commander

The 6th Air Mobility Wing team continues to excel in providing world-class combat, combat support, and humanitarian relief in operations around the globe. There can be no doubt our professional Airmen prosecute Air Force and presidential intent with technical expertise, dedication, and sacrifice, to achieve mission success always. We must not lose sight of these successes as we pause to reflect on recent challenges and the two fatalities we've endured. We value every Airman and cannot accomplish our mission without everyone on the team. Perseverance will carry the day.

Every Airman and Air Force civilian in our wing makes a vital contribution to mission effectiveness. I can't fly my venerable KC-135 Stratotanker without all my teammates. I have to have my ID card to fly. I have to have my medical clearance to fly. Computer access to mission plan. Also needed are mission-capable aircraft, jet fuel paid for and in the tanks, command and control system, and Fire Dogs on the ramp should something go wrong. I have to have our team in order to go fly—and that's where we all have a common purpose: "Fly, Fight, and Win!"

You have to indulge me while I recount some of the critical contributions our wing members have made to the fight.

For instance, the 6th Medical Group provides the only benefit that touches every eligible beneficiary—on and off base—200,000 in the Tampa Bay area. Our medical providers and support personnel cleared 3,900 Airmen last year for deployment and respond to every aircraft emergency, 9-1-1 call, and traumatic event on the base. They also continue to provide care long after these events have subsided, when most of us have had our attention averted to the next crisis. There is ALWAYS "a medic in the house!"

The 6th Mission Support Group has the herculean task of keeping this city called "MacDill" running, while supporting all Team MacDill members. The group re-

Anger is getting harder to control

DEAR WING MA'AM: Sometimes, I get so angry. Lately, I've been getting angry at the people I work with, my family, and I even yelled at one of my closest friends. I don't know if I'm stressed or what?!? I can't really tell what is bothering me, and sometimes it feels like everything bothers me. At times, I feel like I may do something I might regret. What can I do to control my anger?

- The Last Straw

Dear Wing
Ma'am

DEAR LAST STRAW: Anger is a powerful emotion everyone feels from time to time. It is one of the most poorly handled emotions in our culture today. Some common causes of anger are frustration, hurt, disappointment, annoyance, harassment or threats. The way you express your anger can be helpful or harmful. If you ignore your anger it can lead to health problems, tension, accidents and interpersonal problems. Uncontrolled anger can be dangerous and may lead to crime, abuse or more violent behaviors.

First thing you can do to help keep your anger under control is to recognize your anger. Are you feeling tense? Feeling frustrated or disappointed? Next, identify the cause of your anger; sometimes the cause may not be obvious. Third, take a positive step to resolve the problem that caused your anger. Try not to let the angry feelings fester inside you.

When expressing your anger, try to calm down before you discuss the issues. Be assertive when expressing yourself without making in-

Air Force ends pilot travel card program

WASHINGTON (AFNS) — The Air Force recently decided to transition existing Controlled Spend Account travel cards to an enhanced Government Travel Card by the end of fiscal 2012.

“The CSA, a pilot travel card program, provided some enhancements for travelers, but also brought about significant challenges for our most frequent travelers and those with unique mission sets,” said Joan Causey, deputy assistant secretary for Financial Operations. “We recognized that for any travel card program to work, it has to work for all travelers. In the end, we were not satisfied that any proposed changes to the CSA program would get us to the desired state for our most frequent travelers.”

The actual transition will occur in August and September; current CSA cardholders should continue to use their cards as normal. The transition strategy allows travelers to continue using their “blue cards” without interruption. The card functionality will be converted to a GTC by CitiBank without the need to get a new card. Also, travelers will once again be provided with a permanent credit limit, and there will be no need to call for “temporary spend limit” increases.

One of the enhancements being pursued for the GTC program will be via the Defense Travel System. Default settings will be changed to automatically align most non-mileage expenses to the card. Additionally, the traveler can split-disburse any residual funds to their personal account. Finally, as a carry-over from the CSA program, Citi will upgrade their GTC online system to allow travelers to request electronic fund transfers of credit balances directly to their bank accounts.

“The CSA to GTC transition plan is already in motion,” Causey said. “We’re planning a brief test in July to ensure all systems are a go. If all systems perform as expected, roughly 300,000 cardholders will be converted during the August/September timeframe.”

Citi will not process any early transitions and should not be contacted to do so. Further questions by Airmen regarding the transition should be directed to local Agency Program

Children, families feast on ‘Reading Is So Delicious’

by Kathy Makar

MacDill Library

Registration kicks off this month for a shared summer reading program that will reach military families in all branches around the globe.

MacDill readers of all ages can dig into a buffet of book choices around the theme “Reading Is So Delicious.” Most programs will run eight weeks, with open enrollment during the summer. Activities will range by location and include everything from edible art projects to discussions of books like “James and the Giant Peach.”

There was a 400 percent increase in participation across the program, and the plan is to continue this trend with creative programs that connect with readers of all ages. This year’s theme ties in two great flavors – reading for the fun of it and healthy eating.

Research spanning 100 years shows students typically score lower on standardized tests at the end of summer vacation than they do on the same tests at the beginning of the summer. Summer reading programs can help to offset this loss, because studies also indicate students who read recreationally out-performed those who don't. Students read more when they can choose materials based on their own interests.

This year marks the third in which 250 base and installation libraries will participate in the shared summer reading program. Last year's program logged more than 10 million minutes spent reading by children and families participating in the program.

"This was such a great motivator" raved one parent. "I caught David reading on his own yesterday, and he never does that. Thanks for offering the program and the prizes."

Sponsored by the Department of Defense with program content developed by iREAD, "Reading Is So Delicious" will reach thousands of families. The theme is brought to life by illustrators Barry Gott, Chris Eliopoulos, Lucy Knisley and Patrick Girouard. Resource guides for the program were developed by librarians for librarians to motivate children to read.

"Summer reading programs are valuable not only in reducing fall-off in educational attainment over the summer, but as a means for families and children to spend time together, an especially important aspect for military families," added Kathleen Brady, library director.

For more information on the program, call 828-3607 or email 6SVS.Library@us.af.mil.

MacDill Exchange committed to offering best possible prices

by Marianne Blair

MacDill Exchange public affairs

According to a recent article by PC World, more than half of U.S. adult mobile phone owners used a handset for shopping assistance while in stores during the 2011 holiday season. Additionally, a quarter of these shoppers went online to see if they could find a better price for a product they were considering buying.

With smart phones becoming more prevalent as shopping tools, price matching is becoming increasingly popular. With this in mind, the Army & Air Force Exchange Service's "We'll Match It!" program is ensuring military shoppers at MacDill pay the lowest price possible.

Depending on the item, price matches can be done with or without a competitor's ad:

- A price difference of less than $10 is matched on the spot.

- Pricing discrepancies greater than $10 are matched with a current local competitor's ad.

In both cases, products must be identical.

"We even offer a 14-day price guarantee on any item originally purchased from the Exchange," said the MacDill Exchange's General Manager, Nicola Carter. "So, if an item is sold at a lower price by the Exchange, or any local competitor, the price can be matched up to two weeks after the purchase."

The Exchange Catalog and shopmyexchange.com also match lower prices (including shipping and handling) from other online retailers on identical items available for sale and delivery in the customer's area.

Details regarding the Exchange's price matching policy as well as exceptions can be found www.shopmyexchange.com/CustomerSersulting remarks. Try to avoid name calling and making accusations. Be direct, but don't get physical or violent. Remember, sulking in silence when you are angry is not going to solve your problem.

Constructive ways to control a flaring temper can be using humor for minor situations that cannot be helped. Any physical activity like weightlifting, golfing or running can be an excellent outlet for your anger feelings. Engaging in a hobby can also be a positive way to vent. Get plenty of rest and relaxation so your body can reduce tension and deescalate. When you're angry, take time to calm down and think. Then, discuss the issue with the person involved.

Remember, anger is a natural emotion that must be managed. Learn to recognize and understand your anger, then find healthy ways to express and resolve it.

cently garnered four-star recognition for the strides taken in executing the U.S. Air Force Food Transformation Initiative as one of six pilot bases and crushed the toughest Cyber Inspection in the Department of Defense—“Outstanding.” However, while supporting the base, they also sent 75 percent of their Explosive Ordnance Disposal Flight and many combat truckers on deployment, an incredible 1,450 man-days in Afghanistan and Iraq conducting 1,400 combat missions “outside the wire” and moving more than 200,000 cargo tons in support of the President’s Operation Iraqi Freedom Responsible Drawdown—the largest retrograde movement since WWII. Additionally, 124 of our Defenders deployed to nine nations and 10 bases, filling 100 percent of their Air Expeditionary Force taskings. By the way, we don’t do these missions without money and our contracting agents awarded $207,000,000 through 1,482 actions for the 6th Air Mobility Wing, U.S. Central Command, U.S. Special Operations Command, and 36 other partner units to make the mission happen. So for the 6th MSG squadrons, they are absolutely “Six as One!”

The 6th Maintenance Group has the enormous challenge of working on the 50-year-old KC-135s on the ramp. Despite the speed bumps of aging aircraft, under-manning, and lack of parts availability, the maintainers produced 1,600 missions for 6,600 flying hours with 16 KC-135s. Our team conducted operations at three main locations for a month during a runway closure, with no relief from any higher headquarters taskings, resulting in an overall 98.3 percent mission effectiveness rate! Additionally, the 6th MXG dominated a worldwide mobility competition winning the “Best KC-135 Maintenance Unit” and was rated “Excellent” in the Logistics Compliance Assessment Program. In direct support of the fight, 127 of their Airmen deployed this year. “If it’s in the air, MXG put it there!”

So what? How does all this work affect the fight? Our primary task in the Air Force is to put iron in the air to produce combat airpower for the war fighters. All functions, medical, support, maintenance, and operations are required to make this happen. YOU are critical in making this happen.

The result of our effort is the presentation of airpower in the battle space. To that end, the 6th Operations Group experienced unprecedented tasking levels this year. We sustained a tanker super-surge 109 percent above the norm for 10 months. We built 2,845 tanker missions, flew 16,000 flight hours, and transported 52 tons of cargo and 8,123 passengers. In overseas contingency operations we flew 2,188 sorties, offloaded 316 million pounds of fuel to 9,821 receivers, supporting 952 kinetic strikes, 711 shows of force, and 967 troops in contact. Additionally, our airlifters fully supported six combatant commanders, flying 2,184 hours and 740 sorties into 149 airfields with minimal support. They transited 52 nations with only three aircraft! Our operators flew in the initial Operation Odyssey Dawn strikes, expediting the elimination of the Libyan In-

Asian-Pacific Americans grateful to those who serve

Dear Friends:

On behalf of the Asia American Coalition of Florida, I wish to extend my warmest greetings on the celebration of the National Asian Pacific American Heritage Month. Three decades ago, my colleagues and I decided that we needed to form an organization to share our Asian culture with the public to foster better understanding and friendship.

President George Bush designated the month of May to celebrate Asian Pacific

Americans due to two significant events in history: the arrival of the first Asian immigrants to the United States on May 7, 1843, and the completion of the transcontinental railroad on May 10, 1869.

Like millions of others who left their homeland to migrate to America, the first Asian and Pacific Islanders who arrived in the United States in the 19th century were seeking better lives from the ones they left behind. All possessed rich cultures, ancient heritages and beliefs that with hard work they would realize their share of the American dream.

As we celebrate Asian Pacific American Heritage Month today, we honor all of those who have dedicated their lives to making our American Dream possible. We are grateful to those who serve, and to those who have sacrificed their lives to protect us and give us the peaceful, daily lives we enjoy in this great nation.

God Bless America!
